Lydia Midgley is a Retained Search Consultant with HoganTaylor Talent, where she partners with organizations to identify and attract leaders who drive operational excellence and long-term impact. Lydia specializes in executive and senior leadership searches across professional services, technology, consumer marketplaces, and nonprofit organizations, helping clients build leadership teams that can scale strategy, strengthen culture, and navigate growth.

In her role, Lydia leads the full search lifecycle—from leadership profile development and talent market mapping to candidate engagement and final selection. She partners closely with boards, executives, and search committees to align on the capabilities and leadership qualities needed for success.

Based in Tulsa, Lydia is deeply connected to the region's philanthropic and nonprofit community. She serves on the Young Professionals Board for Emergency Infant Services and is actively involved with organizations focused on strengthening the community through service, opportunity, and collaboration.
